TODAY AT THE AUDITORIUM.

The vaudeville bill which opens at the Auditorium this afternoon promises to be one that will please all, as there is just enough variety in it to make one turn follow another without any inteference whatsoever. A comedy seetch of an old fashioned New England and couple living for a few days in a very beautiful New York apartment is Uncle Seth and the Hoodoo, which I be capably presented by Harry M. sical productions, but this afternoon will be his first here in vaudeville and he will be flearly welcomed by all those who know him. De Coma and his those who know him. De Coma and his those who know him. De Coma and his dog Cora will be a special feature of today's show and will surely please ali those who see this elever little animal work. A Tangle in a Flat is the title of the singing and dancing turn presented by Willis and Gilbert, talented artists in this line, while Esmeralda, the world's greatest lady xlyphone artist, will round out the fine bill with her classical and semi-classical selections on this instrument. Everybody makes an attempt to get the reward, but are unsuccessful until a young minister reaches town, and as the hand of the belle of the town is offered as an extra inducement the minister himself starts out to find the robbers, and by a clever ruse succeeds in capturing the whole band and proudly brings them clever ruse succeeds in capturing the whole band and proudly brings them into town, handcuffed together, and is presented the reward and the girl, who has already become much attracted to the little minister. While there is a good deal of genuine comedy in this reached Gibraltar last week he sent home a message that the passage had been rough, but he had kept in good health.

THE KINGS LAST WORDS.

("It is all over, but I think I have done my duty," were King Edward's last words. His motto as Prince of Wales was "Ico Dien-I sciwe.")

They were noble words on the dying

The call of duty rings;
Twas not regret for fading power,
For earth's poor honors wou.
That filed his mind in that last hour,
But thoughts of duty done.

The pomp and pride of life is dear,
Its pleasures are full fair;
This much to have command of all
For which men's hopes most care.
The love of home, the praise of friends,
Hard are they to resign.
So doth this last thought given thus,
To duty brightly shine.
